The Yearbook
For Serious Medical Students

This yearbook is a fact filled documentary covering the school year 1984-1985. The writings in this book are absolute facts and are not meant to be humorous in any way. The captions were selected by a nine member panel which was balanced according to race, age, sex, and religious background. The captions were then reviewed by a three member ethics committee and finally approved by a Supreme Court Judge. The story of Leodus which appears on pages 56-74 was written for the yearbook and should not be repeated, retold, or reprinted. The yearbook is not meant to express any political opinion, religious conviction, or moral sanction.

The contents of this book are copyrighted and can not be reprinted without the express written consent of the yearbook staff and publishing company. Any attempt to unlawfully reprint, reproduce, or republish any part or parts of this book is in violation of the federal copyright act and is strictly forbidden.

The yearbook staff can not and will not be held responsible for the lack of sense of humor on the part of the reader. Any complaint or questions concerning this publication should be expressed in writing to:

is impossible for first year students to enjoy orientation.
Second year students see it as just a "getting back together party" and a time to show their respects to the faculty. By late afternoon, the second year's are getting so boisious the first year's usually leave the party to be with family and friends for the last normal weekend of their natural life. Of course, this doesn't help either the second year's—they didn't know anyone in the first year class anyway. More importantly it involves excess beer and munies and less people to have share them with. The first year students usually go home sick and the second year's with a headache.

By the first day of class, you are so excited you wish you had gotten a job after four years of college like all of your friends. It is hard to be feeling overconfident, insecure, and intimidated at the same time, but most first year's do it rather well.

Time passes quickly through labs, blocks, and summer vacation until finally another orientation day. After each set of blocks, the second year's confidence grows and he or she begins assuming the arrogance that physicians are noted for.

Finally, you wake up one morning and it's the first day of the third year. Naturally, it is everything you didn't expect. No one has ever mentioned IV's, blood gasses, retractors, and call nights. But in the interest of teaching, you can try the IV first. I almost forgot to mention the pimp sessions. No matter how educational, easy going, or benign—a pimp session is still a pimp session.

by the fourth year, you have experienced birth, seen others struggle with death, examined the sick and the healthy, learned to work with oth-

Hopefully, you have realized you will never be perfect will never master all the cepts of disease. It is als a challenge to try to ime each day and learn from mistakes; however, after ing at the kind of people can make it through all of and still laugh—I don't k it will be that big of a blem.

Then I'll get a grip . . .

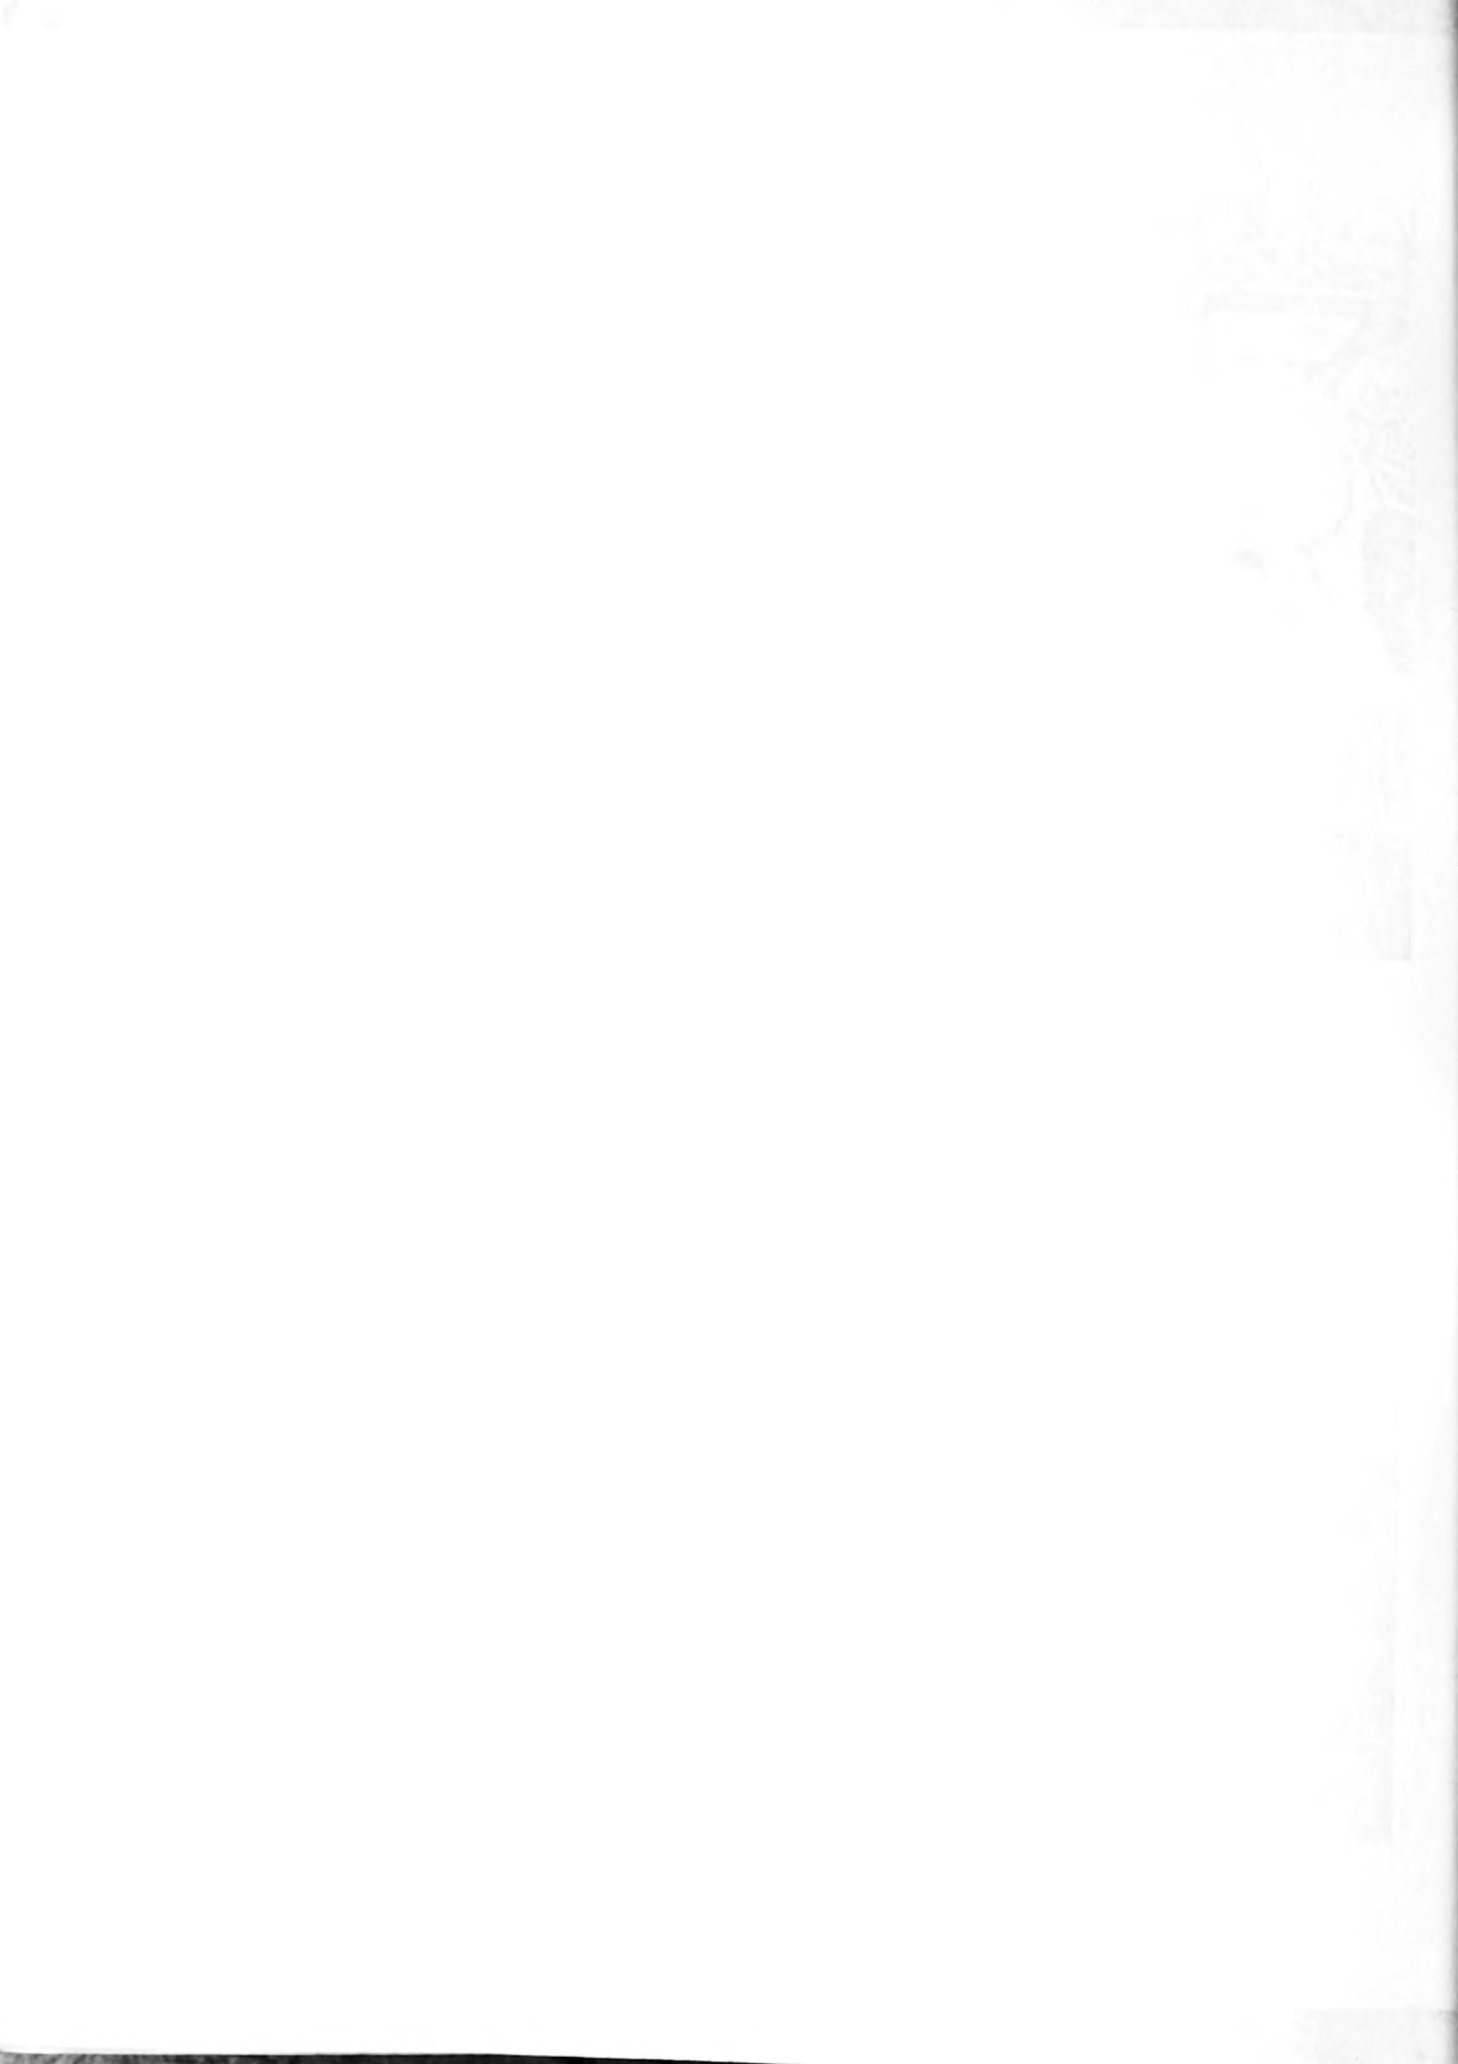

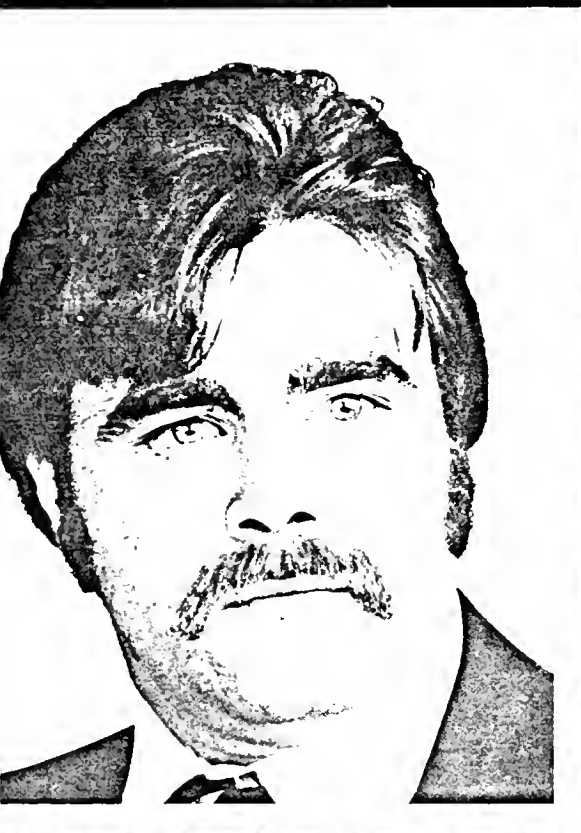

show'em my stuff . . .

and kinda' just let it all hang out!
